

Minariks Apprenticeship in Hairdressing

Over the past 20 years Andrew Minariks has taken on over 15 apprentices trained through Leicester College. He has built a strong relationship with the College, including organising for a team of learners and members of staff from the College to help with the hair and make-up at Miss World in China and on an ongoing basis at Miss England heats.

Andrew said: "Leicester College is in tune with the hair and beauty industry. It's not just about getting the NVQ qualification. I also like the flexibility of training being offered in salon and as a full-time course."

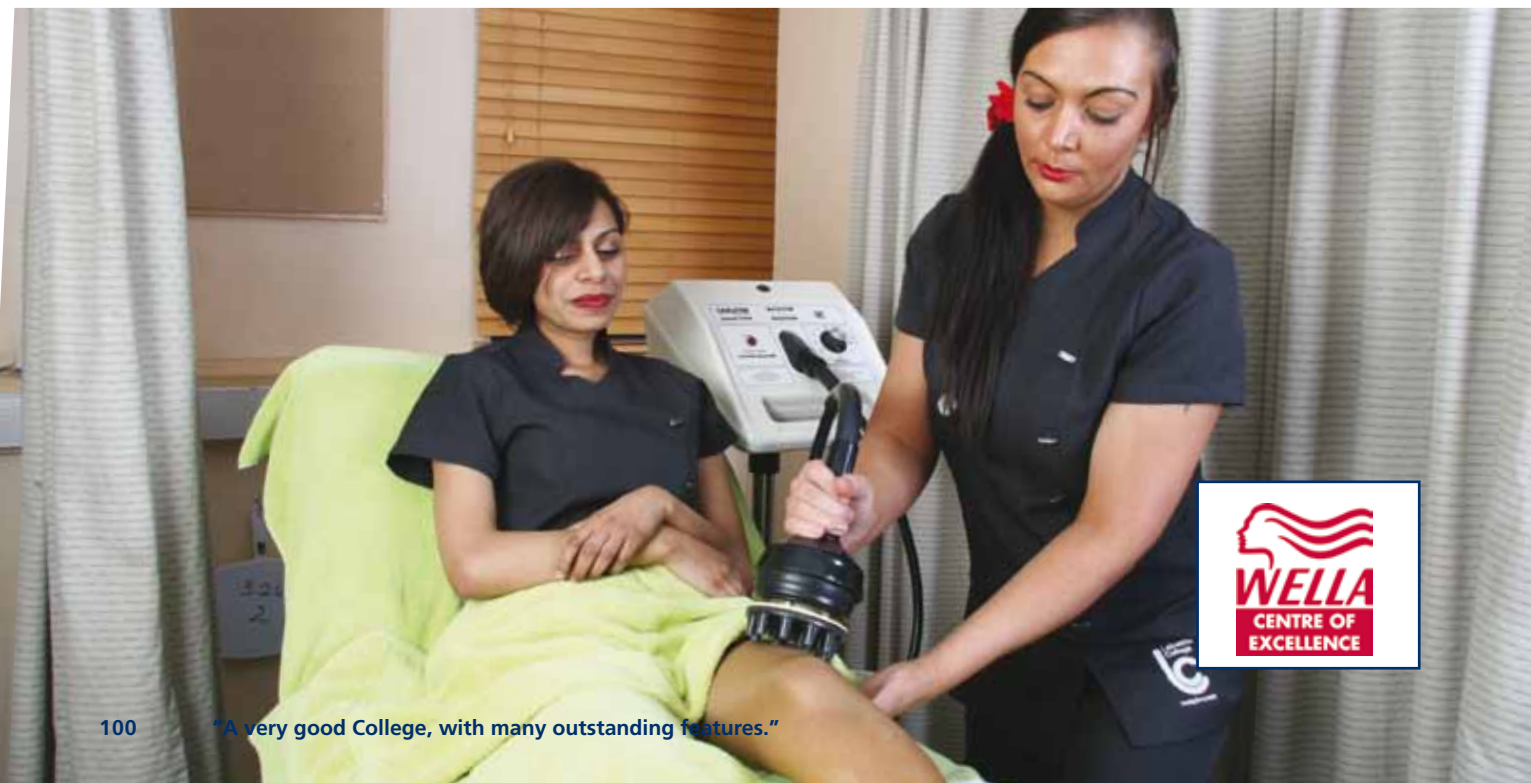

Hairdressing, Beauty, Complementary Therapies and Floristry

The Hairdressing, Beauty, Complementary Therapies and Floristry industries employ thousands of employees in businesses of all sizes across the UK.

We can help employers by offering training within the workplace, enabling stylists and therapists to develop their skills whilst continuing to see clients and generate income. The changing business practices within the UK floristry industry have increased the need for florists to keep their skills up to date with new products, services and trends.

As a Wella Centre of Excellence, we have excellent in-house hairdressing facilities where employees can develop and practise new skills.

We also offer training in other business skills, including customer service, marketing, retail and IT – all of which are invaluable in the modern business world and massively under used in hair and beauty salons. In addition to floristry training, employers may benefit from training to support employee skills with customer service, retail, management and health and safety.
